A LEGACY OF MEETING THE MOMENT

There are heroes in every crisis, from medical personnel in a public health emergency to rescue workers in a hurricane. Whenever the New York region faces a crisis, our donors step up to help their neighbors. Time and again, these hometown heroes meet the moment.

Some donors have also paid it forward by looking to the future. They have made the decision to make a lasting difference for their community by creating a permanent fund in The New York Community Trust. Some put The Trust in their wills, others stipulate that their current funds be managed by The Trust long after they are gone. Over the years, the funds from these donors have given us ready resources to quickly address emergencies, no matter how unforeseen.

To celebrate the vision and caring spirit of these generous New Yorkers, we have created the Legacy Society. To learn more, visit page 42.

By the middle of March 2020, the New York City region was the epicenter of the coronavirus pandemic in the United States. Emergency rooms were overwhelmed, medical professionals searched for effective treatments, and the death toll continued its frightening climb. Midtown emptied, along with our subways, buses, and storefronts. The lights on Broadway went dark, schools closed, and the melodious cacophony that is New York went quiet.

In a matter of days, COVID-19 forced people to rethink how to live, work, and learn. The radical changes in the daily lives of New Yorkers pushed the demand for the services of our legendary nonprofit sector to unprecedented levels. The incredible response by these groups, despite their move to remote operations and the specter of lost funding, is deeply humbling.

As we have for almost one hundred years, The New York Community Trust responded to this crisis with immediate, powerful, and thoughtful solutions. The Trust’s experiences following September 11th and superstorm Sandy showed us the power of collaborating with other philanthropies and nonprofits to amplify our work. The day New York State went "on pause," The Trust announced the creation of the collaborative NYC COVID-19 Response & Impact Fund. We raised $73 million, and in a matter of weeks, made 764 grants to regional nonprofits as they navigated the myriad consequences of the virus. Our Long Island and Westchester divisions hosted relief funds to help address their urgent local needs. All of these grants gave groups a lifeline and the ability to react swiftly to the crucial needs in our community.

The consequences of the pandemic brought to the foreground long-simmering inequities in our city. Among those hardest hit by the virus were Black and Latinx New Yorkers, people with disabilities, and older adults. Low-wage workers were more likely to be exposed to the virus in factories, service businesses, and medical facilities, or lose their jobs entirely. The deaths of Black Americans by police sparked outrage across the country and renewed calls for racial justice in our city. The Trust continued its strong support of grantees working to rid New York of deeply rooted systemic inequities, from criminal justice and healthcare to education and affordable housing.

As the city’s shutdown continued through the year, residents experienced months of anxiety, isolation, and slowed economic activity. We are grateful to our donors, who contributed to help their most vulnerable neighbors and the organizations that worked tirelessly to serve them. We must also remember The Trust’s response to this year’s complex challenges would not have been possible without the generosity of New Yorkers whose charitable legacies are still helping succeeding generations.

The potent combination of new support from our donors and income from our permanent funds allowed The Trust to help grantees tackle their additional demands, including getting meals to the homebound and recently unemployed, keeping students connected to school, and tending to New Yorkers’ mental health.

Welcome signs of hope are all around us as we write this retrospective on a difficult year. Vaccination rates are accelerating and their supply is on the rise. We have a lot of work to do, but we are committed and inspired by the compassion demonstrated daily this past year. We are confident the city will recover—and The New York Community Trust will continue to provide its patient but persistent support of our beloved and courageous hometown.
When the attack on the World Trade Center came out of a perfectly blue sky on the morning of September 11th, 2001, the city plunged into crisis. Nearly 3,000 people died, millions faced uncertainty, the region came to a stunned halt.

“As the enormity of what had happened sunk in,” recalled Lorie Slutsky, president of The New York Community Trust, “all of us were shocked and saddened, but we all had the same thought: ‘How can we help?’”

As emergency workers were still rushing downtown to the smoking rubble, the staff of The Trust gathered in its midtown office, joined forces with the United Way, and created the September 11th Fund, which continued to address the repercussions for four years.

That same spirit drove our response to the COVID-19 pandemic. The Trust’s ability to respond to these and other crises that have periodically shaken New York since our creation in 1924 is in our DNA and has been honed through the decades.

While The Trust and its suburban divisions—the Long Island Community Foundation and the Westchester Community Foundation—often apply a patient, long-term approach to bring about systemic change, our history shows that there are five key ways in which we are well-suited to help navigate through a sudden, calamitous event.
WE HAVE FUNDING AT THE READY

In a sense, The Trust is always ready for a crisis. Because generations of New Yorkers have left legacy gifts in The Trust to help after they pass away, we have funding in hand when calamity strikes.

As far back as the Great Depression, which impoverished millions of New Yorkers, The Trust was able to provide relief by targeting grants from our Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial Fund to the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor and Henry Street Settlement on the Lower East Side.

Today, the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial Fund is still making grants; it is one of more than 400 legacy funds that ensure we can quickly address an emergency. In 2020, it made possible an emergency grant to God’s Love We Deliver so it could deliver shelf-stable meals to thousands of homebound clients with HIV/AIDS or compromised immune systems who were at high risk for developing serious complications from COVID-19.
OUR EXPERTS RAPIDLY DEVELOP STRATEGIES

Since we are thoroughly familiar with the disparate communities and nonprofits in our region, we can hit the ground running when time is of the essence and strategically get funding out in the ways that will be most effective.

When superstorm Sandy pummeled the East Coast in 2012, Long Island Community Foundation staff members could expedite aid to the hard-hit barrier island of Long Beach because of their relationships with the close-knit communities there. Immediately after the storm, staff drove through the area, assessed damage, and checked in with nonprofits to see what was needed. The Long Beach Latino Civic Association used the Foundation’s support to provide bilingual assistance to help residents apply for benefits, coordinate volunteers for clearing muck and debris from homes, and organize drives for food and bedding. The Foundation also helped Long Beach Reach provide mental-health and educational support to families with children who were displaced, distraught, and unable to go to school.

In New York City, much of the public attention was focused on the unprecedented images of water filling subway tunnels and flooding neighborhoods that had always seemed safely removed from our waterways. Trust staff recognized that one isolated, often overlooked part of the city, the Rockaways—particularly its lower-income areas—would need help.

The storm caused unprecedented flooding, fires, and extensive damage to homes, businesses, and cars throughout the Rockaway peninsula. Many of the residents were cut off from electricity, heat, phones, and basic supplies. Without working elevators, older adults in the poorer neighborhoods in the north were stranded on the upper floors of their buildings.

The Trust turned to nonprofits it knew could assist, and many even went beyond their usual missions. After quickly putting out a request for proposals, we funded the Queens Public Library to provide the displaced with shelter, hot meals, and a chance to read books in warm mobile libraries; and the Ocean Bay Community Development Corporation became expert in coordinating the in-kind donations of food, clothes, floor tiles, doors, and home accessories for restorations.

“The New York Community Trust came in with workforce dollars that allowed Ocean Bay to offer hard- and soft-skills training to prepare residents for some of the job opportunities that came up in construction, demolition, carpentry, plumbing, and for electricians’ helpers,” recalled the organization’s executive director (then program director), Jonathan Gaffney. “We educated close to 200 people and we had an 80 percent job placement rate. We were also able to use this opportunity around workforce development.
training for community meetings and civic engagement. We helped create a level playing field, give the community a voice, and prepare them for the opportunities to get good-paying jobs.”

In September 2008, the stock market crashed after the faltering of the international banking system and the bankruptcy of the iconic Lehman Brothers bank. The Trust knew the impact would ripple out beyond the financial sector. It quickly developed a social safety-net program that put more than $10 million out into the community within weeks of the meltdown. The Trust sent grants to United Neighborhood Houses for its 36 settlement houses so their young people and older adults would continue to get the services they needed, such as food assistance, employment training, and educational support. As the Great Recession weighed on the city, The Trust made grants to City Harvest for emergency food distribution, to Vibrant Emotional Health for an expansion of its counseling services, and to Legal Services NYC and Legal Aid to form the Economic Crisis Legal Assistance Project, which helped low-income New Yorkers navigate issues with government benefits and consumer debt.

WE CREATE POWERFUL COLLABORATIONS

There is power in numbers. The Trust has built relationships over the decades with philanthropies, individual donors, and nonprofits that allow us to multiply our potential impact by creating working partnerships in a moment of crisis.

When the coronavirus pandemic hit the region in early 2020, The Trust and its suburban divisions quickly formed funds in collaboration with other donors—corporations, foundations, and individuals—to marshal aid to nonprofits unprepared for the disruptions to the economy and life as we knew it.

The Trust and its philanthropic partners announced the NYC COVID-19 Response & Impact Fund and issued a request for proposals from front-line nonprofits the same day the state was put “on pause.” Within a week, the Fund made its first grants. The Fund soon raised $73 million for grants from more than 1,300 donations for small and medium-sized nonprofits working in the human services and the arts and cultural sectors (another $37 million went out in no-interest loans through the Nonprofit Finance Fund). Much of the funding was aimed at helping organizations meet immediate needs, including staff salaries, moving operations online, and obtaining equipment to protect workers and clients. Our suburban divisions in Long Island and Westchester also created funder collaboratives, which raised an additional $3.5 million from more than 200 donations to benefit local nonprofits.
These collaborative funds created “one-stop shopping” for nonprofits who were hard-pressed for time while trying to meet escalating demands for their services, confront lost revenue due to stay-at-home guidelines, and transition to remote work.

After the Apollo Theater received a grant, Jonelle Procope, its president and CEO, wrote: “We are grateful to know that we do not face this crisis alone, and that you are with us. We are confident that we will see the other side of the pandemic, and that we will rise stronger than before.”

Collaboration has helped us “meet the moment” for decades, such as when the AIDS epidemic struck the city in the 1980s: thousands were dying each year, and the response was complicated by the prevalence of anti-gay bias at the time.

The Trust’s AIDS-related work began in 1983, when we used our Francis Florio Fund—created 10 years earlier to investigate blood diseases—to support one of the first privately funded AIDS research projects in the nation. By 1989, with the number of cases reaching 100,000, The Trust joined with others to address both the disease and the stigma associated with it. Working with the Ford Foundation’s National Community AIDS Partnership, The Trust formed the NYC AIDS Fund to coordinate grantmakers, government, nonprofits, and people with AIDS to educate, conduct research, and provide needed services locally. Two years later, The Trust and the Council of Fashion Designers of America Foundation created the CFDA Foundation-Vogue Initiative/NYC AIDS Fund to support local nonprofits in their efforts to combat the disease locally through research, education, advocacy, and palliative care. By the time the NYC AIDS Fund sunsettled after 25 years of grantmaking, it had made close to $30 million in grants.

WE TAKE THE LONG VIEW

The Trust can act quickly to tackle the immediate impact of a catastrophic event, which can seem overwhelming in the moment, but experience has taught us that a crisis can have a long tail and unexpected consequences. Our planning also addresses recovery efforts that may last long after the initial shock abates.

While the September 11th Fund was created the same day as the attacks on the World Trade Center, its work continued for four years. Grantmaking started with immediate needs, such as financial assistance to 100,000 people and hot meals delivered to Ground Zero for rescue workers, but evolved to help thousands of displaced workers train for new careers, expand the availability of mental health services, and counter Islamophobia.

A catastrophe can be seen as a stress test for our systems, bringing into high relief the needs for improvement. We work with nonprofits after each crisis so that the region builds back stronger, more equitably, and better equipped to meet the next crisis.

During the fiscal crisis of the 1970s, the city teetered on the edge of bankruptcy; federal help was not forthcoming (captured in the famous New York Daily News headline: “Ford to City: Drop Dead”). Civic leaders, elected state and city officials, financial executives, and the unions pulled it back from the brink. But The Trust also helped put mechanisms in place that would let the city better navigate out of the crisis. It worked with others to create a task force of nonprofit and government leaders who analyzed the impact of proposed budget cuts on nonprofits that relied on city contracts to fund human services and recommended ways to minimize their impact. A Trust grant to the Citizens Budget Commission in 1978 allowed it to forecast the city government’s revenues and expenditures for the following five years, helping to guide policymakers and financial watchdogs in efforts to get the city back on track.

Our Westchester division—to help its county continuously improve its readiness for the inevitable next crisis—has strengthened Westchester’s Community Organizations Active in Disasters planning group. That relationship informs the Westchester Community Foundation’s grantmaking as the group tracks local needs, coordinates response efforts, and ensures that volunteers are well integrated into the work of emergency personnel.

WE LOOK BEYOND THE CRISIS

When catastrophes strike, philanthropy and community responses shift to an “all-hands-on-deck” mode, focusing on the crisis at hand. The Trust knows an emergency response cannot be allowed to eclipse the ongoing needs of New Yorkers. In 2020, the killing of several Black Americans by police ignited urgent calls and nationwide demonstrations to end long-standing racial injustices, which were compounded by the disproportionate impact of COVID-19 on communities of color. Those disparities helped shape The Trust’s pandemic response, even as its grantmaking continued to address other enduring challenges to racial equity.

In 2020, donors stepped forward in extraordinary ways, allowing The Trust to make $266 million in grants, second only to 2002 when the September 11th Fund led to $369 million in grants. The ongoing work of The Trust, though, did not pause: we made hundreds of grants unrelated to the pandemic that encouraged civic participation, improved environmental quality, and continued efforts to improve the well-being and economic opportunities of New Yorkers.

ONE FOR ALL

The eight counties that The Trust serves are densely populated, massively complex, and have a justifiable reputation for gritty resilience. When confronted by crises, New York has bounced back and crawled forward. It’s the city that never sleeps, but it also never stops. The sprawling machinery of the region, though, needs continuous vigilance, and for almost 100 years The Trust has been at the ready. Whether the latest challenge demands a rapid response or a sustained solution, we bring together the generous neighbors and dedicated nonprofit workers who keep our beloved community safe, strong, and vibrant for all.
Addressing Racial Disparity

From the desk of Vice President for Grants Shawn Morehead

The coronavirus pandemic touched everyone, but communities of color were disproportionately devastated, experiencing higher rates of illness and death. Black and Latinx New Yorkers were more likely to be laid off or work in high-risk, frontline positions. And predominantly Black and Latinx neighborhoods not only have crowded, multi-generational housing that facilitates the virus’ spread, but also lack adequate internet connectivity, leaving residents struggling to connect to remote healthcare, work, and school. Although the coronavirus is new, these inequitable circumstances, and their results, are not.

Widespread demonstrations in New York and throughout the country following the killings of George Floyd and other Black Americans reminded us all that systemic racism is deeply entrenched throughout our society, and the solutions are as overdue as they are long-term.

At The Trust, we make grants to make our region a more equitable place, from creating new opportunities for artists of color to building intergenerational wealth and advocating to minimize police presence in public schools. Our grants are also helping build the leadership skills of young people, who not only led recent demonstrations, but will take us into a future where race does not predetermine outcomes.

While we are proud of the progress we have helped foster, we are keenly aware that there is much more to be done. In this “Grants in Action” section, you can read about some of the grants The Trust made with our Emergency Fund and income from our permanent funds in 2020. I hope you will get a sense of the breadth of our work and the many solutions we are supporting across issues ranging from healthcare and education to the region’s environment and community development.

This work would not be possible without generous donors past and present and our dedicated grantees who stepped forward in big, bold ways during a very difficult time. We are honored to help them make our region stronger and more equitable.
EDUCATION & JUSTICE

Trust grants help build a fairer and more equitable justice system for New Yorkers. They also support an education system that works for all students, especially those with special needs and English-language learners.

PRESERVING BLACK WEALTH
Many Black families face legal challenges and other obstacles to passing their homes on to the next generation. Grow Brooklyn helps families protect these valuable assets by ensuring they have clear estate plans, avoid foreclosures, and are able to navigate the court system.

GIVING FAMILIES A CHANCE TO SUCCEED
Our city's child welfare system should help families thrive. But reports of child mistreatment and neglect in New York State can have unintended consequences. Once a parent is marked in the system, they are ineligible for many types of employment, cutting them off from job opportunities and making it more difficult to provide for their children. With our grant, Manhattan Legal Services is advocating for a fairer system for tracking reports of child mistreatment, educating parents on their rights, and representing parents so they can clear their records and find meaningful work. At right, an attorney for the organization, Washcarina Martinez Alonzo, informs parents and advocates via Zoom.
Nonprofits providing vital services, including childcare, social services, and food distribution, faced a spike in demand, budget cuts, and the need for remote and socially distanced work. Our grants helped them adapt to these changes quickly so they could help New Yorkers through the pandemic.

Caring for the South Asian Community

Community centers accustomed to providing services in person had to quickly pivot during the pandemic to deliver food to homes and connect to their constituents virtually. This was the case for India Home, a center serving older South Asians in Queens. A Trust grant helped it create a survey to assess clients’ needs and the issues that affect them daily. The group is using the findings to improve their services, such as addressing mental and physical health, delivering halal and vegetarian meals, and organizing yoga, meditation, and other activities virtually. Here, an India Home community ambassador distributes masks at a local Sikh house of worship.

Feeding Students During a Pandemic

School meals are a lifeline for thousands of New York public school students suffering from chronic food insecurity. During the pandemic, city kids have been stuck at home, away from friends, teachers, and the meals they relied on every day. With our support, Community Food Advocates is working with city agencies to get free school meals to the children and adults who rely on them. At left, student activists thank their cafeteria workers.
COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT & TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

DESIGNING A NEW CITY
Every New York City neighborhood should have equitable access to design resources that support its planning needs. With the Urban Design Forum, Van Alen Institute is using our grant to further the work of Neighborhoods Now, a pandemic response initiative that connects architects, designers, engineers, lawyers, and planners with community organizations leading local recovery efforts. To date, Neighborhoods Now has supported more than 100 small businesses and cultural organizations, including more than 20 restaurants that have participated in the city’s Open Restaurants program. The effort also is working to reactivate underused public spaces as sites for cultural programming.

FIGHTING FOR BROOKLYN TENANTS
Many families living in rent-regulated buildings lost jobs during the pandemic and struggle to pay rent. With federal and state eviction protections about to expire, The Trust is funding Flatbush Tenant Coalition at Flatbush Development Corporation to build tenant power in Brooklyn neighborhoods with communities of African, Caribbean, and South Asian descent; expand housing and immigration rights events in these neighborhoods; and connect tenants with legal help, job information, and pandemic-related assistance.

From housing and commerce to civic affairs and voting rights, The Trust works to make sure our city’s communities stay strong. Grants also support the nonprofit sector by improving fundraising, board governance, and management.
Arts and cultural groups saw their venues close abruptly, faced unprecedented disruptions, and lost revenue. Trust grants let these organizations adapt to working virtually and outdoors, expand audiences online, and help artists.

SOLIDIFYING THE FUTURE FOR A THEATER GROUP

Opportunities in the arts are crucial for young women of color because they offer a platform to project their voice and to respond to the sociopolitical issues that shape their lives. The viBe Theater Experience in Brooklyn is an important resource for these New Yorkers, providing space and support to write, direct, and perform original theater productions at no cost. A Trust grant is helping viBe develop new leadership and continue to provide a transformational experience for young women of color. At left, a participant recites poetry at a socially distanced performance.

ILLUMINATING THE PAST FOR NEW AUDIENCES

One of the oldest buildings in the city, the Morris-Jumel Mansion in Washington Heights is a National Historic Landmark that has witnessed more than two centuries of the city’s history, serving as both George Washington’s war headquarters and a location in which Lin-Manuel Miranda wrote parts of Hamilton. The Mansion is using a Trust grant to reinterpret its history to include the stories of enslaved residents, indentured servants, and working-class people, and create a more accessible museum-going experience. The historic home also will produce English-Spanish bilingual descriptions, resources, and programs designed to engage its surrounding community.
Leading a rich and meaningful life comes from being able to be independent, employed, and engaged in community and motivating activities. Trust grants work to provide these opportunities and more.

PREPARING GROUP HOMES FOR FUTURE CRISSES

People with developmental and intellectual disabilities, who often live in group homes and have chronic health conditions, are at increased risk of contracting COVID-19 and other contagious diseases. With our support, the New York Alliance for Inclusion and Innovation is creating and testing disaster planning resources for groups that serve people with disabilities, so organizations can respond more effectively to the next crisis, and protect the lives of their residents.

HELP FOR YOUNG JOB SEEKERS

People with disabilities have fewer educational and employment opportunities than the general population, and government programs often fail to provide the support students with physical and learning disabilities need to transition from school to a meaningful job. With Trust funding, Bridges from School to Work is providing job counseling, placement, and continuing support to high school students facing this transition. At right, a mentor and mentee discuss job opportunities.
We cannot take our air, water, and other natural resources for granted. We all depend on the health of the environment, and The Trust is facilitating our collective duty to protect it.

CLEAN GREEN SPACES FOR ALL
As the COVID-19 pandemic led to widespread closures, many New Yorkers found solace in the city’s open green spaces, with parks becoming one of the few places for fresh air and recreation for millions. But more visitors and budget cuts meant more wear and tear and fewer resources to address it. From Willowbrook Park in Staten Island to Van Cortlandt Park in the Bronx, the City Parks Foundation is using our grant to make sure parks are clean and well maintained by promoting nonprofit and volunteer stewardship throughout the five boroughs.

RETHINKING WASTE MANAGEMENT
Over the past few years, shipping U.S. waste overseas to be recycled ceased to be a viable option. This made it cost-prohibitive for many towns and cities across the nation to recycle. To reinvent how we deal with recyclables, the Solid Waste Environmental Excellence Performance (SWEEP) Standard for Sustainable Materials Management is using a Trust grant to create performance standards and a tracking system that will help local municipalities reduce waste and costs.
HEALTH & BEHAVIORAL HEALTH

ASSISTANCE FOR OLDER VETERANS ON LONG ISLAND

Whether in nursing homes or living alone, many senior citizens not only have faced the highest risks from COVID-19, but their mental well-being has suffered due to extreme isolation. Our Long Island Community Foundation division made a grant to the Association for Mental Health & Wellness to monitor the health of older veterans, and to help them transition from independent living to assisted living and make other end-of-life plans.

CHANGING HOW WE TREAT ADDICTION

Drug overdoses among opioid users are up in New York City, and a Trust grant to Housing Works was aimed at reversing the trend. The group is taking advantage of improvements in federal policy to expand the use of medication-assisted treatment, where prescribed drugs and counseling are tailored for an individual’s needs. To ensure this treatment continues, Housing Works is developing a system to make this a viable option that can be financed under Medicaid. At right, a Housing Works staff member tends to a client.

Our healthcare system has been tested by COVID-19 and disparities in care have been amplified. The Trust works to improve health systems and make sure quality care is accessible to everyone who needs it.
The pandemic crippled the city’s service economy, thrusting many into unemployment. Trust grants are helping to retrain some of these workers for in-demand jobs and connecting young people with the skills they need for well-paying careers.

EXPANDING THE HEALTHCARE WORKFORCE
New York’s healthcare system was pushed to the limit by COVID-19, putting a spotlight on the need for front-line health workers. With a 2018 Trust grant, LaGuardia Community College began a program to train emergency medical technicians and work with community groups to recruit students and award scholarships to low-income Queens residents. With a subsequent 2020 grant, LaGuardia is expanding the program to meet the demand for emergency medical technicians and paramedics brought on by the pandemic, shown at left.

WESTCHESTER GIRLS TAKE CHARGE
To ensure women achieve equity in the workplace and beyond, the next generation needs mentoring to help them find their voices as leaders. With a grant from our Westchester Community Foundation division, G.O.O.D. for Girls provides quality, long-term, one-to-one, and group mentoring, predominantly to Black and Latina girls, ages 9 to 18, at a pivotal time of life when they can take important steps toward adulthood and independence. The young women also take part in financial literacy, leadership, college, and career exploration activities. At left, girls participate in a pre-pandemic course on programming and flying drones.
EVERYONE COUNTS
Undercounting New Yorkers in the census puts political representation and significant federal funding at risk. Our 2010 citywide collaborative investment in census outreach was successful. In 2020, we expanded our investment statewide. The New York State Census Equity Fund invested more than $3.5 million in get-out-the-count activities, starting in 2019 and continuing through October 2020—the end of the COVID-extended census schedule. Grants to dozens of community groups, libraries, and other nonprofits across the state made sure more New Yorkers got counted.

BUILDING AN EQUITABLE ARTS ECOSYSTEM
We created the Mosaic Network and Fund in 2018 to help arts and cultural groups led by and created for African, Latinx, Asian, Arab, and Native American people. To succeed, these groups need flexible funding and stronger connections to philanthropy. In 2020, the Network brought together 280 people, representing 160 arts groups and 49 funding entities, for three virtual learning exchanges exploring the redistribution of power, taking collective action, and catalyzing systemic change.

IMPROVING CITY SCHOOLS
For more than 30 years, the Donors’ Education Collaborative fought for the most vulnerable in New York City’s public-school system, which serves 1.2 million students. To make funding more equitable, expand access, and create a responsive curriculum, the collaborative funded advocacy and organizing, helping to seed and nurture some of today’s strongest voices for educational justice.

Low-income parents, immigrant families, and racially diverse students are now a regular part of policy decision-making. The Trust also won a more equitable funding formula for schools based on student need and revisions to school discipline policies, reducing suspensions citywide. The collaborative recently concluded its work, making a total of $19.4 million in grants since its inception. The Trust will continue to help the city’s schools through its competitive grants program.

2020 COLLABORATIVE FUNDS
Combining Resources for Impact

For decades, we’ve brought funders together to address the challenges facing New York City, Long Island, and Westchester. By pooling dollars in collaborative funds, donors can take on larger agendas or longer-term challenges than they could on their own. In 2020, we housed 15 collaborative funds in The Trust and our suburban divisions—distributing more than $8 million through 140 grants to vital organizations. Thank you to all who gave. Highlights from the year follow:

The COVID-19 pandemic hit New York hard, but it also has been met with profound generosity. The Trust and its divisions in Westchester and Long Island created response funds that pooled contributions from more than 1,700 donors and made nearly 1,000 grants, totaling $95.2 million.

While the largest of these funds, the NYC COVID-19 Response & Impact Fund, was set up to get money quickly to nonprofits in the early days of the pandemic, the others, such as the Emergency Fund, have continued to raise and distribute funds through 2021 so the city can rebuild and recover. Generous support from our donors has helped hundreds of organizations function safely and assist New Yorkers, and adapt to these challenging times. Rapid funding helped social service organizations deal with a spike in demand and enabled arts organizations to pivot to operating virtually. We also helped homeless students learn remotely, reopen businesses and nonprofits, train health workers to see patients using telehealth services, and maintain the city’s green spaces.

RESILIENCE & RESOLVE:
Eighteen founding donors came together in March when it became clear that COVID-19 would have devastating consequences for the city. The resulting NYC COVID-19 Response & Impact Fund targeted the immediate needs of small and mid-sized nonprofits in the human services and arts and cultural sectors. The grants helped nonprofits get equipment to protect staff and clients, as well as transition to remote work. Grants also paid employees and covered other fixed costs as revenues dried up. CASE STUDY: HELP FOR FAMILIES OF CHILDREN WITH DISABILITIES
Getting the best care for kids with disabilities can be complicated in the best of times, but COVID took the challenges to a new level. In 2020, INCLUDEnyc had a nearly 100 percent increase in demand for its services. With emergency funding from The Trust, the organization expanded its programs and Help Line hours, offered more virtual support groups and workshops, and co-hosted community forums with the NYC Department of Education.

“With changes coming out constantly, we were able to adjust our offerings in real time to help families better understand their rights and options and navigate the ever-changing landscape of remote learning.”

Ways to Give

If you would like to:

GIVE to the charities of your choice in an easy, organized, and tax-saving way

Then consider:

Setting up a DONOR-ADVISED FUND. You fund it, we invest it; you suggest grants, we do the paperwork. You can involve family or others in your charitable decisions, name the fund for yourself or in honor of a loved one, or remain anonymous.

LEAVE a bequest to support causes or communities you care about Creating a PERMANENT FUND. Our expert staff will ensure your gift is invested soundly and grants are made on your behalf to effective organizations working in the fields you care about, for generations. You can choose the name for your fund or remain anonymous. See the impact of permanent funds in our “Grants in Action” section (p.12-21).

GET philanthropic advice tailored to your charitable interests, values, and goals

Taking advantage of PHILANTHROPIC ADVISING. Individuals, families, foundations, and corporations use us to assist with their giving. Some clients work with us in lieu of hiring staff. They turn to us for expertise on issues, to run grant programs, and to create flexible long-term philanthropic plans designed to adapt to tomorrow’s challenges.

WORK with other funders to address tough problems

Joining one of our FUNDER COLLABORATIVES. This is a great way to pool resources and wisdom to tackle thorny issues facing New York City and beyond. Learn more on page 22.

HELP New Yorkers face today’s most urgent issues

Giving to our COMMUNITY NEEDS FUND. Each year, contributions to this fund are used to address our city’s most urgent needs through grants to effective nonprofits. Donations of all sizes are gratefully accepted.

Giving through The New York Community Trust is simple.

Looking to the Future Through the Past

NICK OPINSKY is a senior development officer in institutional giving at American Jewish World Service, and a volunteer at several nonprofits. He has a field-of-interest fund in The Trust and is a member of our Legacy Society.

My great-grandmother became financially independent at a young age and dedicated the rest of her life to giving back. It has always been my goal to follow in her footsteps and those of my ancestors who were instrumental in establishing some of the most important institutions in the fields of education, social justice, and the arts. Though the world is very different today, as I explore supporting groups working in LGBTQI rights, racial justice, and arts education, it still feels like I am following the path of those who came before me.

The fund that I set up with The Trust was the perfect philanthropic vehicle for me. It was a very simple process, but it led me to think about the legacy I could leave when I’m not here, even if that might be a very long time from now. It’s remarkably useful to have The Trust advise you on philanthropic goals even when you are doing it on a small scale. The goals that I set up for my fund were very broad, purposefully, because I recognize that the world can change.

As someone who had never really thought much about ‘estate planning,’ I think it’s great that The Trust makes starting a fund so easy and accessible. And the experience of thinking about the impact I want to have during and after my life has added another level of meaning and perspective to my daily work.

After I created a fund at The Trust, it gave me peace of mind. I felt prepared and grounded—that if something catastrophic happens, there is a plan in place that will continue to do good in my name, a living instrument to continue my legacy and help the causes that I really care about.”
Giving Back to Honor and Heal

STEPHEN C. ROBINSON is a Trust board member and of counsel at Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher and Flom, LLP. He is a former U.S. District Judge in the Southern District of New York and U.S. Attorney for the District of Connecticut. He has a fund at The Trust with his daughter, Dr. Victoria Robinson, who is also a member of The Trust’s Giving Collective.

My two older brothers and I were raised by our mother, Yvonne, in the Marcy housing projects in Bed-Stuy, Brooklyn. Like virtually everyone in the projects, we grew up in difficult economic circumstances. What drove us out of those circumstances was our mother, who was one of the smartest people I have ever known. If she had been born 25 years later, she would have been the federal judge. Because of the power of her intelligence and vision for what we could be, all three of us went to college.

As important as education was to my mother, it was equally important that we remember that the opportunities we had only came because there were people who marched, fought, bled, and died for people like us. I absorbed those messages, and my mission became to develop myself as fully as I could so that I could give back as much as I could.

That mission is fundamental to who I am and to how I’ve tried to live my life and raise my daughter, Victoria. My wife died when Victoria was 11 years old. Understandably, we were devastated. After one of many sleepless nights, Victoria said a simple sentence that would take us out of our downward spirals and set our path forward. She said: ‘We need to find a way to turn Mommy’s death into something good for someone else.’ In that moment I understood that she got the meaning of life: if you have good luck, you pay it forward; if you have bad luck, you turn it into something good for someone else. My 11-year-old daughter understood that the way to healing is helping other people, even through your pain.

Victoria, now Dr. Robinson, is the donor advisor of the fund we opened at The Trust in honor of her mother. The Trust is perfect for us because its expert staff provides information that makes us smarter about the needs of New Yorkers and the organizations addressing those needs and creating the change we hope to see. Investment in The Trust is a natural extension of what my mother taught me, and my daughter understood. The Trust helps you find opportunities to do something good for someone else.”
During the estate planning process, clients often involve their lawyer or financial advisor to help them shape their charitable giving, but ultimately clients need to decide what causes are important to them, how they want to structure their giving, and whether they want to involve family members.

It can be a sensitive and complicated process, but The Trust is uniquely suited to help you and your clients successfully navigate it.

Since 1924, we’ve been working with lawyers and financial advisors to help their clients with philanthropy. The Trust is the right choice for thousands of generous New Yorkers because of our staff of experts, range of giving options, capacity to accept complicated assets, knowledge of community needs, and efficient management.

Contact us for a copy of our tax-exemption letter, fund information, and suggested wording to help draft the gift instrument. Donors can set up funds in either The New York Community Trust or in Community Funds, Inc. (CFI), our not-for-profit corporate affiliate. They share staff and a governing board, and file a combined IRS return.

The IRS has classified us as “tax exempt” under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code; as a “publicly supported” organization under Section 170(b)(1)(A)(vi); “not a private foundation” under Section 509(a)(1); and as a “community trust” under Treas. Reg. Sections 1.170A-9(e)(10) and (11).

This status ensures donors the maximum tax benefit allowed by law. This also applies to our divisions, the Long Island Community Foundation and the Westchester Community Foundation.

To learn more, contact Carrie Trowbridge, general counsel, at (212) 686-2563 or Carriertrowbridge@nyct-cfi.org.

CREATING A FUND

IN THE NEW YORK COMMUNITY TRUST
The Resolution and Declaration of Trust Creating “The New York Community Trust” (the R&D) details the powers and duties of the trustee bank, and our Distribution Committee (governing board). To set up a fund in trust, the founding document must incorporate the R&D by reference and the donor needs to select one of our trustee banks. Call or visit our website for a list of these 11 banks.

IN COMMUNITY FUNDS
Community Funds, Inc. (CFI) is a New York not-for-profit corporation. The assets of a fund with CFI are managed by outside money managers and overseen by our staff and Investment Committee. Call or visit our website for a copy of our Certificate of Incorporation and bylaws.

IN OUR LONG ISLAND OR WESTCHESTER DIVISIONS
The Long Island Community Foundation and the Westchester Community Foundation are divisions of Community Funds, so donors have the same options described above. See page 31 for contact information.

THREE KEY FACTS

- If a change of circumstances makes literal compliance with the terms of the gift “unnecessary, undesirable, impractical, or impossible,” our governing body can change those terms. Donors are assured their gifts will remain useful forever.
- We must review the terms of a fund before accepting it.
- For funds held in trust in The New York Community Trust, a co-trustee is not permitted.
Connecting Clients to their Community

PATRICIA MARCIN is a trust and estates attorney, a partner at Rivkin Radler, and the chair of the Long Island Community Foundation.

Working with a community foundation allows professional advisors to give clients a connection to the causes that they care about. We’re helping people on both ends: the people who need the help and the people who want to help. I love it.

During their lifetimes, donors can become involved in the nonprofits that they’re interested in and develop experience in the charitable world. They can see how the community foundation works and get greater access to the people and nonprofits actually doing the work. I think it’s a much more satisfying experience than dealing with a commercial donor-advised fund administrator.

The things that we—as regular citizens—don’t know in regard to the needs of a community are astounding. As both an attorney and as the Long Island Community Foundation board chair, it’s been eye-opening for me.

Community foundations make sure donors’ money goes where they want it to go. I have clients that take great comfort in knowing that if the charity they currently are supporting isn’t around down the road, or has significantly changed its mission, the community foundation will locate other charities doing the best work in that area. Donor-advised funds provide a wonderful alternative to a private foundation, and all the costs and hassle that’s involved with them.

When I talk to donors about community foundations, I often emphasize the opportunity to leave a charitable legacy, get their family involved, and have their name attached to something that makes a lasting difference.

How does it make me feel? Fabulous. As you can tell, making these connections gets my endorphins going. So I feel great about working with the Long Island Community Foundation and The New York Community Trust. I just can’t say enough about them."
The twelve dedicated New Yorkers—selected for their judgment, integrity, and understanding of philanthropic needs—serve as both the Distribution Committee of The Trust and as the Board of Directors of Community Funds, Inc. Six members are nominated by civic authorities representing the public: one by the Mayor of New York City; one by the Chief Judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit; one by the chairman of the Partnership for New York City;
one by the chairman of Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts; one by the president of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York; and one by the chairman of the New York Academy of Medicine. These six members select five additional people to serve, and the president of The Trust is a member by reason of office. The Committee meets five times per year.

Subcommittees include Endowment, Finance, Audit, and Investment. The latter sets allocation, recommends investment managers and vehicles, and monitors investment performance. The Fund Purposes subcommittee makes sure we honor the intent of each donor’s philanthropy and the Suggestion Review subcommittee evaluates donors’ grant suggestions to ensure they meet our guidelines.

Notes to Consolidated Financial Statements

(1) Organization
The New York Community Trust and Community Funds, Inc. (including its Long Island and Westchester divisions) (The Trust) are community foundations created to build permanent charitable endowments for the greater metropolitan region. The Trust, as the consolidated foundations are hereinafter referred to, is tax-exempt under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (the Code) and has been determined not to be a private foundation under Section 509(a)(1) of the Code. The Trust administers more than 2,000 individual charitable funds, each established with an instrument of gift describing either the general or specific purposes for which grants are to be made, from a spending plan distribution, income, and in some cases from principal.

(2) Summary of Significant Accounting Policies
Accounting standards provide that if the governing body of an organization has the ability to remove a donor restriction, the contributions should be classified as net assets without donor restrictions. However, under New York State law and The Trust’s governing instruments, the assets are held as endowment funds until such time (if ever) as the governing body deems it prudent and appropriate to expend some part of the principal or appreciation. Accordingly, the consolidated financial statements classify all net assets as without donor restrictions.

Cash equivalents represent short-term investments with original maturities of 90 days or less, except for those short-term investments managed as part of long-term investment strategies.

Fixed assets are recorded at cost and are depreciated on a straight-line basis over the estimated life of the respective asset. Leasehold improvements are depreciated over the life of the respective improvement or the remaining term of the lease, whichever is shorter. Fixed assets are reported net of accumulated depreciation of $920,578 in 2020 and $796,600 in 2019.

Grants and services to beneficiaries (Grantmaking) are primarily unconditional and usually paid within one year. Unconditional grants are expensed with approval of the Distribution Committee of The New York Community Trust (NYCT) or the Board of Directors of Community Funds, Inc. (CFI). Conditional grants are recognized as expense after all barriers have been met by the beneficiary.

The Trust has adopted a constant growth spending plan for many of its funds. This approach allows spending to increase at a steady rate within the confines of a floor, a ceiling, and a cap. The spending plan is not applied to funds in CFI that are considered to be underwater, as defined by New York State law. At December 31, 2020 and 2019, no fund was considered to be underwater.

Accounting estimates are an integral part of the consolidated financial statements prepared by management and are based upon management’s current judgments. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

Certain amounts in 2019 have been reclassified to conform with the 2020 presentation.

In 2019, The Trust adopted Accounting Standards Update (ASU) No. 2018-08, Not-for-Profit Entities (Topic 958): Clarifying the Scope and the Accounting Guidance for Contributions Received and Contributions Made, with respect to contributions received. The adoption of this portion of the ASU did not have a significant impact on The Trust’s consolidated financial statements. The portion of this ASU related to contributions made was adopted by The Trust in 2020, which also had no significant impact on The Trust’s consolidated financial statements.

(3) Liquidity and Availability of Financial Assets
Resources available to The Trust to fund general expenditures, such as operating expenses and grants, have seasonal variations related to the timing of spending plan distributions and receipt of gifts. The Trust actively manages its resources, utilizing a combination of short, medium, and long-term operating investment strategies to align its cash inflows with anticipated outflows. Furthermore, there are likely to be additional components of The Trust’s investments that may be available and liquid within one year. These components include certain portions of marketable alternatives, as well as return of capital from private equity. At December 31, 2020 and 2019, financial assets available within one year to fund general expenditures were as follows:

(4) Investments and Fair Value Measurements

Fair value is defined as the exchange price that would be received to sell an asset, or paid to transfer a liability (an exit price), in the principal or most advantageous market for the asset or liability in an orderly transaction between market participants on the measurement date. A fair value hierarchy requires The Trust to maximize the use of observable inputs and minimize the use of unobservable inputs when measuring fair value. The three levels of the hierarchy are:

- Level 1 inputs are quoted or published prices in active markets for identical assets or liabilities.
- Level 2 inputs are inputs other than prices included within Level 1 that are observable for the asset, such as quoted prices for similar assets or liabilities.
- Level 3 inputs are unobservable inputs for the asset or liability.

ASC 820, Fair Value Measurement, allows The Trust, as a practical expedient, to estimate the fair value using net asset value (NAV) for commingled investments that do not have a readily determinable fair value.

Most of The Trust’s investments are in publicly traded securities or in commingled funds that invest in publicly traded securities. Fair value for these investments is based on quoted market prices or published prices. The Trust also invests in hedge funds and private equity investments, including private real estate investments. The fair value of these investments has been determined primarily through the net asset values provided by the fund managers utilizing quoted market prices for underlying securities, market values for comparable companies, an income-based approach, or discounted cash flow projections. The Trust received a gift of interest in a limited liability company (LLC), which is carried at fair value based on The Trust’s interest in the net assets of the LLC. The valuation is reviewed for reasonableness by management of The Trust.

The Trust invests for long-term growth in real terms, consistent with a reasonable degree of risk. Donor advised funds that require a high degree of liquidity are invested in cash equivalents. The investments of NYCT are held in individual trusts at the bank designated by the donor in the instrument of gift.

The following tables present The Trust’s investments at December 31, 2020 and 2019, respectively:

The Trust’s investments valued at NAV include:

Hedge Funds – Consist mainly of multi-strategy funds that attempt to generate consistent positive returns by focusing on opportunities that are not correlated with the overall markets. This category also includes two funds that seek to achieve equity-like returns with lower volatility than the equity markets. These funds may be redeemed at net asset value at least annually and in most cases more frequently. Advance notice of 30-90 days is required to redeem these investments.

Private Equity – These funds focus on buyouts – primarily of midcap companies. Certain funds of funds also have a small allocation to venture capital. As the underlying investments are liquidated, assets are distributed. Funds are expected to be fully liquidated over the next 10 years. Certain of The Trust’s investments in private equity involve future cash commitments, which amounted to approximately $54 million at December 31, 2020.

The following table presents a reconciliation for all Level 3 assets measured at fair value for the period from January 1 to December 31:

(6) Commitments
On March 30, 2004, The Trust entered into a lease agreement for office space expired March 31, 2020. In June 2017, The Trust signed the Amendment of Lease to extend the lease term through August 31, 2030. Future minimum annual rental payments are approximately $2.0 million in 2021 to 2025, and a total of $10.0 million thereafter through 2030.

Rental expense is recognized on a straight-line basis, in accordance with ASC 840, Accounting for Leases. The excess of recognized expense over actual rent payments as well as landlord-provided improvements has been recorded as deferred rent credits. Rent expense for the years ended December 31, 2020 and 2019 amounted to $1,117,407 and $1,362,862, respectively.

(7) Pension and Postretirement Medical Benefit Plans
The Trust administers a noncontributory defined benefit pension plan covering substantially all employees. Benefits are based on years of service and the employee’s compensation during the five highest consecutive years during the last ten years of employment. The Trust also provides medical insurance benefits for its eligible retired employees. Obligations and funded status at December 31 are as follows:

The accumulated amounts not yet recognized as a component of net periodic benefit cost were $4,502,630 and $(320,682) at December 31, 2020 for the pension and postretirement medical plans, respectively. The estimated amounts that will be amortized into net periodic benefit cost in 2021 are $53,362 and $(5,000), respectively.
The healthcare cost trend rate assumption for 2021 is 5.10%, decreasing to 4.80% in 2026.

The pension plan is invested in a balanced portfolio of equity and fixed income securities. Annual projected benefit payments for the pension and postretirement medical benefit plans are expected to average $1,826,000 and $115,000, respectively, through 2030.

The following tables present The Trust’s fair value hierarchy for the investments of its defined benefit pension plan as of December 31, 2020 and 2019, respectively:

The Trust also sponsors a defined contribution retirement plan in which contributions are based upon a specified percentage of salaries and years of service. The expense for this retirement plan was $753,987 in 2020 and $704,618 in 2019.

Subsequent Events

The Trust evaluated its December 31, 2020 consolidated financial statements for subsequent events through April 21, 2021, the date the consolidated financial statements were available to be issued. The Trust is not aware of any subsequent events that would require recognition or disclosure in the consolidated financial statements.
Independent Auditors’ Report

Distribution Committee of The New York Community Trust and Board of Directors of Community Funds, Inc.:

We have audited the accompanying consolidated financial statements of The New York Community Trust and Community Funds, Inc. (including its Long Island and Westchester divisions) (collectively, The Trust), which comprise the consolidated statements of financial position as of December 31, 2020 and 2019, and the related consolidated statements of activities and cash flows for the years then ended, and the related consolidated notes to the consolidated financial statements.

Management’s Responsibility for the Consolidated Financial Statements

Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of these consolidated financial statements in accordance with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles; this includes the design, implementation, and maintenance of internal control relevant to the preparation and fair presentation of the consolidated financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

Auditors’ Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these consolidated financial statements based on our audits. We conducted our audits in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the consolidated financial statements are free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the consolidated financial statements. The procedures selected depend on the auditors’ judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the consolidated financial statements, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity’s preparation and fair presentation of the consolidated financial statements in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity’s internal control. Accordingly, we express no such opinion. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of significant accounting estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the consolidated financial statements.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.

Opinion

In our opinion, the consolidated financial statements referred to above present fairly in all material respects, the financial position of The New York Community Trust and Community Funds, Inc. (including its Long Island and Westchester divisions) as of December 31, 2020 and 2019, and the changes in their net assets and their cash flows for the years then ended in accordance with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles.

SURGE IN GIVING: The Trust’s donors and President Lorie Slutsky were quoted in this article detailing the outpouring of philanthropic support in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The New York Times

Philanthropy Rises in Pandemic as Donors Heed the Call for Help

Caring has surged during the coronavirus crisis, eclipsing absences during the 2008 recession and after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, two reports show.

By Paul Gruber

April 25, 2020

When the coronavirus pandemic first went into lockdown in March, dozens of the world’s richest people, companies and foundations responded by committing billions of dollars to help the world’s health systems and poor.”

THANK YOU

The Trust received many thank-you letters from nonprofits in 2020, as we do every year. Because our donors make all of our giving possible, we are sharing these expressions of gratitude. To everyone in our community of donors and nonprofits, we add our thanks to those expressed in the letters below.

“In times like this, we’re reminded of how interconnected we all are. Thank you for being part of our community. Without you, none of it is possible.”

Dr. Andre K. Peck, executive director
Fuljens Henry, deputy executive director
Haitian Centers Council

“This gift will directly and immediately provide critical services to thousands of our struggling neighbors right now—we cannot thank you enough for this essential support.”

Warren B. Scharf, executive director
Lenox Hill Neighborhood House

“As we move forward during these uncertain times, we are comforted by your support of our mission and efforts. We are grateful beyond words.”

Robert Federico, executive producer
Rafael Sánchez, associate artistic producer
Repertorio Español

“A grant of this magnitude helps vulnerable and medically fragile individuals with disabilities, and front-line staff (whose efforts are from a profoundly existential place of shared humanity) feel secure in the knowledge that they are loved, looked after and will never, ever be lost sight of.”

William R. Guarinello, president and CEO
Linda M. Tempel, executive director,
Developmental Disabilities Services
HeartShare Human Services of New York
ALWAYS READY

From the Great Depression to COVID-19, The Trust has always brought together caring donors and exemplary nonprofits to make our region better.
